SHIFTING WEIGHT BY THOUGHT

DR. ANDERSON OF YALE SHOWS HIS "MUSCLE BED."

Balanced His Models on It and When They Bed-Running Motions Sent the Feet Down-Effect of One Glass of Milk.

The muscle bed, intended to register the effect of thought or muscle action of mankind, was demonstrated before a large audience in the theatre of the Young Men's Christian Association in West Fifty-seventh street yesterday afternoon. Dr. William G. Anderson, director of the Yale gymnasium and inventor of the apparatus, lectured on his contrivance and conducted

In the centre of the stage Dr. Anderson had erected the huge wood and metal machine, which he introduced to his audience as the result of years of experiment and research. Behind the "muscle bed' stood three men and three young women in gymnasium suits.

Now. I shall take the men first," said Dr. Anderson. "Number one, please. I propose to demonstrate to you the influence of thought upon the muscles."

Do you mean to say that thinking affects the muscles?" demanded a large lady in the second row.
"I certainly do," answered the inventor.

*Concentrating your thought on certain physical actions so affects the muscles as to cause a flow of blood to that part of the body, and thus the same effect is produced as by exércise."

What does the muscle bed have to do with that part of it? Does it cause action or thought?" was another question. "Neither," answered the doctor. "The muscle bed registers the thoughts and shows the blood condition of the body. The bed is so constructed that one lying upon it can be perfectly balanced. Then the thought is shown to the naked eve by the motion of the bed. Now, for instance, No. 1 will be perfectly balanced." No. 1, a tall young man, took his place on the balance slab, which the doctor called

Now you will see that he is perfectly balanced. By using his brain you will see that the bed will sink at the head. Now multiply 318 by 16. Now multiply 113 by 4. The bed began to move. There was a noticeable dropping at the head.

"Work more. Multiply 612 by 9." "Now multiply 1.783 by 14."

There was a shiver of the scales and the head of the bed dropped. "Beautiful!" said the doctor. "You see the blood rushes to the head. Therefore, the bed, perfectly balanced, sinks with this additional weight. Now what is the value of massage? No. 2 come to the bed." But No. 2 hesi-

No. 2 was "perfectly balanced" while a masseuse deeply kneaded the muscles of the limbs. Down went the bed at the feet. "Now I am going to put that man on the level," said the doctor. "Multiply 987 by The bed did not move.

"Multiply 1,765 by 14." Still the bed was immovable. Mathematics must be easy for youmultiply 78,965 by 743." Still the bed did het move.

The doctor bent over and saked a question under his breath. That last one was too much for me, enswered number two, "I just didn't bother my head about it." Number two was then sold to multiply by 9 and 9 by 8 several times, and this process brought the bed back to an even Now, number three, please, called the doctor. "I am going to demonstrate the effect of a glass of milk on a man." The audience laughed and the doctor said he to Mr. and Mrs. P. Lorillard Ronalds, Jr., who will arrive early next month.

The sudience laughed and the doctor said he wished he could demonstrate the effect of a glass of whiskey.

The man was balanced on the bed and the glass of milk was placed beside him on a line with the stomach. Then the man drank the milk and the glass was put where it had been so that there would be no chance in the way the weight of the man, the milk man, Mr. William N. Rodewald, Mr. and Mrs. John Greenough, Mr. P. Lorillard, who will arrive early next month.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Rives and Miss Rives arrived at the club to-day for several days. Among other arrivals were: Among the rarrivals were: Among t and the glass was distributed on the bed. Nevertheless the bed went down at the

"What was in that milk?" demanded a woman in the rear of the hall.

"Nothing but milk," the doctor replied.

"Then I'd just like to know why it went to that man's head—I would, I would, I would, I would, "retorted the woman.

"It did not, madam," said the doctor, "the milk sent the blood to his head. Now we will have the young ladies. Number one, please." An elongated blonds in bloomers and

An elongated blonde in bloomers and sweater responded.

"We will have the deep knee bending, the running pace and the heel raising. Then I will show you what effect it has," promised Dr. Anderson.

The model proved first that she was "on the level," and then, springing out of the bed with a jump, went through the motions of running, squatting and heel raising. When she was again put to bed it sank at the feet with a thud.

The next woman, who was short and broad, was put through the running and jumping exercise and, as in the case of her predecessor, the bed sank at the feet, then was worked up to the level again with the multiplication table.

But it was number three, tall, gray-eyed and auburn-haired, who won the hearts of the spectators. She was told to think of poetry she had memorized and try to recall all of it that she could.

"Now, when I was in Boston," said the doctor, "I demonstrated the work of the muscle bed most satisfactorily. The young ladies there are given to concentrating their thoughts.

"You please do the hand stand." requested thoughts.

Now please do the hand stand, requested the doctor of number three. She called one of the assistants and in the twinkle of an eye her heels were six feet in the air, of an eye her heels were six feet in the air, and there was not a limp muscle in her body. The audience applauded.

"Now," said the professor triumphantly,
"I will show you a remarkable thing."

Number three was placed on the balanced elab and down went the head to the step cock.
Then the reaction set in. The bed quivered a moment and dropped at the feet.

"But what is the conclusion?" asked a spectator.

"But what is the conclusion?" asked a spectator.

"The conclusion?" repeated the doctor.

"The conclusion? Why we have found an instrument that aids us in establishing the effect of thought on the muscles, or rather on the blood and in turn on the muscles."

"Will thinking about your feet warm them?" another woman wanted to know.

"It certainly will. Thought is equal to exercise," said the doctor.

That ended the demonstration.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

The Board of Education building, at Park avenue and Fifty-ninth street, was without water for several days recently. The plumber who was called in, spending several hours in searching for the cause of stoppage, found it in the supply pipe. When the pipe was opened out wriggled a live eel, thirty inches long and two inches thick. The eel went home to dinner with the plumber and the teachers are now able to drink.

A man stood on a Harlem corner the other day accosting passersby. Taking each one aside he spoke in low tones and handed him a coin, sometimes a nickel, sometimes a half dollar. The recipients nodded and a har doing. The recipients nodded and started into a saloon midway in the block. An inquisitive man walked over toward the stranger, who nodded and handed him a quarter telling him to go down to the saloon and spend the money. This was the saloon and spend the money. This was the explanation:

"We've got a jay in there we're going to sell out to, and we guaranteed him so much business daily, so we've got to make good until the deal is closed. It was a little dull to-day, good many of the boys away, so my partner is keeping the jay inside while I'm giving the business a boost on the outside."

"Carry your religion into business" advice often heard from the pulpit, but whether it is desirable to carry one's business into religion may be open to question. This was the opinion of the attendance at the regular Thursday evening prayer meeting of a Long Island church recently, when a fervent brother ended an earnest prayer in this fashion: "And this we ask, O, Father, in the name of Him who taught us to pray. Yours truly, J. B. Woodhart."

Two men of different nationalities lay side by side in the ward for rheumatic patients in a downtown hospital. One of them, an Irishman, was twitting the other on the lack of fortitude in bearing pain. on the lack of fortitude in bearing pain.

After a time an attendant came in and began to massage the patients. When it came the Irishman's turn he grunted and swore softly to himself. Then he turned on his side, with a twinkle in his eyes, to watch the other man. To his surprise the other seemed rather to enjoy the operation. It was too much for the Irishman's curiosity.

"How in thunder did you stand it so well?" he demanded.

"You don't think that I was fool enough to give him the sick leg to work on, do you?" was the answer.

M. QUINTON OFFERS NEW SUP-PORT TO DARWINIAN THEORY.

Discovers More Than the Accepted Fifteen Elements That Enter Into Composition of the Living Body, Which Are Also Found in Sea Water-His Conclusion

London, April 16.-Ten years ago the njection of salt water as a restorative to patients dying from loss of blood aroused general interest. The discovery of this quality of salt water probably suggested to the French savant, M. Quinton, a long and patient research concerning sea water the conclusion of which throws unexpected light on and adds support to the Darwinan theory of evolution.

M. Quinton maintains that sea water is the natural source from which, as Prof. Haeckel believes, elementary bodies rise which develop into all the species, including the human. The environment whereir the anatomical elements of living creatures exist is neither more nor less than a marine one. Our tissues and cells continue to exert their functions in a fluid where the composition bears the closest resemblance to that of sea water. Hitherto the number of elements entering into the composition of the living body was considered about fifteen. M. Quinton has shown the existence of traces of at least fourteen others, which are also found in sea water, such as copper, lead, silver and gold. Further, if an animal is bled to the point of exhaustion and the place of the blood supplied with sea water the animal regains its strength in one day, and there is complete recovery in five days. M. Quinton injected into animals a quantity of sea water greater than their own body weight without toxic effect. The injection of pure water rapidly causes death. Thus sea water appears to be the true nutrient fluid for animals, in fact their natural plasma.

LONDON SMILES AT THIS STORY Humanitarian League's Plan to Expose Flogging in the Navy.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN LONDON, April 16.-The secretary of the Humanitarian League has, in behalf of the committee, written a letter to Lord Selborne, First Lord of the Admiralty, which has sent a smile around London. The secretary reminds his Lordship of the existence of a widespread erroneous impression that flogging has been abolished in the navy, whereas the birch and cane are still used on boys up to 18 years of age. Then, pointing out the desirability of the public being made familiar with features "so popular in the service," he informs his Lordship that the league purposes to placard the walls of London and the chief seaports with the pictorial representation of naval caning and birching. The secretary concludes with the following calm request:

"As we are anxious that the picture shall in every way be accurate and not liable to the charge of exaggeration, we venture to ask the Admiralty to allow photographs to be taken as it is inflicted."

DE RESZKE DEMANDS VOICES. Turns Away Students Who Can Pay but Cannot Learn to Sing.

Paris, April 16.—M. Jean de Reszke's school of singing opened here yesterday.

M. de Reszke has been overwhelmed with applications. He believes in frankness when selecting his students, thus differing from those teachers who consider fees before art. Consequently those whose main qualification was ambition were sent away sorrowing.

The classes are limited to four or five, so as not to go beyond the personal supervision of M. de Reszke. For the earlier stages, at all events, no assistants will be employed. In time it will be so arranged those able to do so paying for those who are not. Thus a talented poor student will not be shut out from the advantages M. de Reszke's estimate of the English voice is that it is "throaty, but capable of development. AMERICAN VEIL DENOUNCED.

Paris Finds That It Adds to the Theatre Hat Evil.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUS London, April 16.-America has given a name to a fashion, if not the fashion itself, which is responsible for the following wail from Paris:

"The cry of the theatregoer who has been unable to get a view of the stage because of the women's hats, has become more agonized than ever. It was fondly believed that the evil had been scotched but this year it [has arisen more terrible and more defiant than ever. Not only has it visibly grown in dimensions, but now about its periphery is hung a net-like contrivance known technically as the American veil. The mosquito net may have its uses in the street, but in the theatre it gives the spectator behind absolutely no chance It reposes in a dense coil on one side of the hat, while all possible view of the stage is cut off by a large feather on the other." EXPLAINS SUBMARINE'S FATE. Three Seconds Would Have Saved the British Boat, Says Lord Selborne. Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, April 16 .- Lord Selborne, the First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking at Bath to-day, said that the optical tube and part of the conning tower of the submarine torpedo boat A1, which was run down and sunk off Portsmouth on March 18, had been recovered and that they bore marks which made possible an explanation of the accident. An officer had been ordered to keep a lookout for the cruiser Juno, which it was the duty of the submarine to "blow up." In his anxiety to sight her he neglected to scan the horizon. Suddenly he saw the bows of a great ship tooming up in the field of vision and made the submarine dive. It appeared that three seconds more would have taken the submarine under the ship safely.

AFFECTIONATE FIREMAN. He Kissed Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. Delmage and the Row Gets to Court.

Mrs. Josephine Delmage, who lives at 644 Third avenue, got a summons yesterday in the Yorkville police court for Mrs. Lulu Crawford to have her explain certain stories which broke up the Delmage house-

Minister: Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Ferreirra. The Crawfords and the Delmages lived on the same floor in the Third avenue house. Last Wednesday the landlord told some Calles, Chargé d'Affaires for Rolivia; Miss Hagerman, Mrs. Keep, Miss Wilson, Miss Hitchcock, Miss Ridgely, Miss Clayton, Miss Lovering, Miss Lucy Kean, Miss Wet-more, Miss Calderon and Miss Gwynne. things to Mr. Crawford when he returned from work that evening. Crawford taxed his wife with what the landlord told him, and she said it was true, but she was sorry and would not let it happen again if he would forgive her. She begged him for MISS WICKES FREE OF FREELAND. the sake of their two children to forgive her and she added that her neighbor, Mrs. Delmage, had done the same things. Crawford forgave his wife and told Mr. Del-Mrs. Eliza Herriman Freeland obtained mage what his wife had done. Delmage accused his wife, who denied Delmage accused his wife, who denied the truth of the story. The man took his two children and left his wife and refused to ge back to live with her unless she could disprove the stories, so she summoned the other woman to court.

Magistrate Crane asked Mrs. Crawford why she had started those stories.

"They are true," she answered. "Fireman Joseph Radigan of Engine 8 did visit me and Mrs. Dolmage. He hugged and kissed me and he hugged and kissed me and he hugged and kissed me she woman.

Mrs. Freeland was a Miss Wickes, and, "Yes, he did. You know he did. He sat on the sofa and hugged and kissed us both," Mrs. Crawford declared. Fireman Radigan was in court and the Magistrate called him up. The fireman denied that he had hugged or kissed either McHUGH
